Description	Ringworks are medieval fortifications built and occupied from the late Anglo-Saxon period to the later 12th century. They comprised a small defended area containing buildings which was surrounded or partly surrounded by a substantial ditch and a bank surmounted by a timber palisade or, rarely, a stone wall. Occasionally a more lightly defended embanked enclosure, the bailey, adjoined the ringwork. Ringworks acted as strongholds for military operations and in some cases as defended aristocratic or manorial settlements. They are rare nationally with only 200 recorded examples and less than 60 with baileys. As such, and as one of a limited number and very restricted range of Anglo-Saxon and Norman fortifications, ringworks are of particular significance to our understanding of the period. Despite having been partly levelled on the south, the ringwork at Woodgarston Farm is a good example of its type. The earthworks are well preserved and the interior contains remains of a well and indications of further buildings. The site has not been excavated and holds potential for further investigation. It will contain archaeological and environmental information relating to the construction and use of the ringwork as well as the landscape in which it was constructed. History See Details

Details

This record was the subject of a minor enhancement on 18 June 2014. The record has been generated from an "old county number" (OCN) scheduling record. These are monuments that were not reviewed under the Monuments Protection Programme and are some of our oldest designation records.

The monument includes a ringwork surviving as earthworks and below-ground remains. It is situated just below the summit of a chalk plateau at Woodgarston Farm, north-east of Upper Wootten.

The earthworks include a sub-circular enclosure approximately 40m in diameter defined by a bank, 2.4m above ground level, and an external ditch. The top of the bank is about 5.8m above the bottom of the ditch. The earthworks have been partly levelled at the south. On the west side is a causeway across the ditch and a lowering of the bank, which is likely to be the location of an original entrance. The interior of the enclosure is a slightly raised at the north-east corner indicating the site of a building. The standing and buried remains of a well also survive within the interior and are included in the scheduling. The ringwork is considered to have had an associated bailey enclosure to the south, in the area now occupied by buildings of Woodgarston Farm, and one to the east but these are not included in the scheduling.

The ringwork is possibly mentioned under 'Wealagaerstune' in a charter of AD 945. It has been suggested that it was associated with a small settlement of 10th century or earlier origin. In 1995 an archaeological watching brief on the site of a new telecommunications tower at Woodgarston Farm, in the immediate vicinity of the monument, did not reveal any archaeological features or deposits.

Description A church built c.1140 with alterations in the C14, 1851 and 1887.

Circa 1140, C14, 1851, 1887. Norman aisleless nave with a short chancel, small C19 vestry, and restoration timber bell turret. The chancel has fragments of early work (suggestion of former apse end to the east wall), including filled windows, with C14 traceried and cusped windows; the round arch rests on cushion and floral caps to attached columns. The nave windows are varied but old, and the north door is Norman with chevron decoration. At the west end of the nave is a medieval stair turret now gives access to the bell turret, which has exposed supporting timbers. Fittings include a pulpit of 1651, C17 pews, a round C13 font on 3 new shafts, a C17 communion rail (at the west end) associated with a C15 screen. The C14 north porch is timber-framed with arched entrance, scalloped barge boards and tiled roof. Walling is of flint (part laid herring-bone fashion), with stone dressings. The large bell-turret has tile-hanging, with scalloped bands, and a pyramid roof.

Description	C17 house

House. Circa C17, partly rebuilt and extended in the C18, altered circa early C19 and extended later in the C19. Flemish bond red brick, containing some timber-framing, partly tile-hung. Clay plain tile hipped roofs. Brick axial stacks. Plan: the front (E) range comprises 2 rooms and a central entrance; the left (S) room of 2 timber-frame bays incorporates an axial stack and cross-passage; the right (N) end was rebuilt in the C18 with another room behind forming an overall L-shaped plan. In circa early C19 the timber-framing of the south end was faced in brick and later in the C19 an outshut was built in the angle at the rear.

Exterior: 2 storeys. Asymmetrical 4-window east front. Tall 2-light casements with glazing bars in cambered arch openings, centre first floor blocked and small C20 window inserted; later C19 brick gabled porch at centre; the right-hand 2 bays has higher eaves, brick plat band and plinth which continue on the right (N) return. At the rear, the roof of the main range is carried down as a catslide over a single-storey outshut; C20 casements.

Interior; some exposed timber-framing and ceiling beams. Room with C18 panelling, panelled window shutters, bolelection chimney piece and panelled doors.

Description	Monk Sherborne War Memorial was unveiled in June 1923 by Reverend Geoffrey Harold Woolley VC (1892-1968) who had been the first Territorial soldier to receive a Victoria Cross, for his bravery at the Battle of Ypres (20-21 April 1915). Additional names were added after the Second World War. In 2002 a metal fence was erected round the memorial to celebrate the Golden Jubilee of Elizabeth II. First World War memorial, unveiled in 1923. The designer is not currently known. The names of the fallen of the Second World War were subsequently added. MATERIALS: Portland stone. DESCRIPTION: the memorial is located on a traffic island at the junction of Salters Heath Road and Monk Sherborne Road. It consists of a wheel cross with Celtic knot decoration on a tapering rectangular shaft with a moulded capital. This is mounted on a tapering plinth set on an octagonal base. A carved scroll at the top of the shaft bears the legend 'IN MEMORIAM' in relief. The front face of the plinth bears the inscription 'GREATER LOVE HATH NO MAN THAN THIS'. The names of the fallen are inscribed on the shaft with the eight names from the First World War followed by the date 1939-1945 and the four names from the Second World War. The memorial is surrounded by a low metal fence* with gilded pineapple finials to the corner posts, installed in 2002.

From Hampshire HER online:

Winklebury is an Iron Age 'plateau fort' enclosing an area of 7.6 hectares. It has gradually been encroached upon by surrounding housing developments and has lost most of its defences. In the southwest corner a length of eroded rampart survives to a height of 2m. There is no remains of the ditch associated with this rampart but to the east some 200m of ditch survives to a depth of 2m and 5m in width. This is crossed at the southeast corner of the fort by a causeway and then continues northwards before becoming lost in house gardens. First documented in 1290 AD as WILTENISCHEBURY (Fort of the people of Wilton/Shire).

Description	Formal walled gardens and informal gardens with a lake, largely dating from the C18 although with features surviving from both their C17 origin and their subsequent C19 and C20 development, set within parkland which was established in the C16 but planted to its present form in the C18 and C19. HISTORIC DEVELOPMENT The Vyne formed part of the manor of Sherborne Cowdray which belonged to the Fyffhide family and which, on the death of William Fyffhide in 1362, was recorded as having a manor house and chapel (VCH 1908). It came into the hands of the Sandys family in 1386 who also acquired a medieval deer park which lay to the north-east of the present parkland. After a short period of ownership through marriage by the Brocas family, the Sandys regained possession in 1488 and in 1496 it was inherited by William Sandys who was ennobled as Baron Sandys in 1523 and appointed as Henry VIII's Lord Chamberlain. He integrated the former medieval buildings on the site to form a substantial moated courtyard mansion which was probably completed by 1515; this mansion probably had gardens (guidebook). Much of the present parkland was also incorporated into the estate during the C16. The Vyne descended through the Sandys family although after the death of Lord Sandys in 1540, they seem to have preferred the former priory at Mottisfont (qv), which Lord Sandys had acquired in 1536, as a home. Some years after the death of Colonel Henry Sandys in 1644, his son sold The Vyne to Chaloner Chute, a Parliamentarian and later Speaker of the House of Commons during the Commonwealth. He demolished two thirds of the Tudor house and made significant alterations to the remainder including the addition of the north-east portico, employing the architect and pupil of Inigo Jones, John Webb (1611-72). He added further to the gardens north-east of the house and he, or his successors, also built ponds and a walled garden (Chute archives). The Vyne was inherited in 1754 by John Chute who, as a friend of Horace Walpole, assisted with the decoration of Walpole's Gothic Revival villa at Strawberry Hill (qv) in London. Chute redesigned and refurnished much of the interior of the house, removed most of the formal gardens, and may have been responsible for the enlargement of the lake to its present form. After his death in 1776, little change occurred at The Vyne until it was inherited by a Chute cousin, William Lyde Wiggett, in 1827, Wiggett taking the name Chute. William improved and modernized the whole estate, repairing and altering both the interior and exterior of the house and the stables and gardens. He was succeeded by Chaloner

Chute, then by his grandson Charles who was created a baronet in 1952. On the death of Charles Chaloner in 1956, The Vyne was bequeathed to the National Trust and it remains (1998) in their care.

DESCRIPTION

LOCATION, AREA, BOUNDARIES, LANDFORM, SETTING

The Vyne is situated on the east side of the A340, Basingstoke to Tadley road, c 1km north-east of the village of Sherborne St John on the lane leading to Bramley. The 100ha registered site, which comprises c 10ha of formal and informal gardens, 35ha of parkland and 55ha of woodland, lies in the shallow valley of a north-east-flowing stream, the valley sides rising gently to low crests to the north-west and south-east. The site is divided by the lane to Bramley which forms the eastern boundary to the area of the house and gardens. A further lane runs along the length of Morgaston Wood on the northern boundary while the southern edge of this wood abuts the stream and water meadows. The remaining site boundaries open onto a landscape of undulating open farmland and woodland.

ENTRANCES AND APPROACHES

The principal, formal approach to The Vyne is on the south-east side from the lane to Bramley. Plain wrought-iron entrance gates stand on the lane, on the axis of the south-east front. These, set between white stone piers with rustications which have sometimes been attributed to John Webb (guidebook) but may be of C18 origin (listed building description), are flanked by further iron screens ending in brick piers surmounted by stone vases (ensemble listed grade II). From the gates, a broad gravelled drive, laid out by Charles Chute in the early C20, leads c 180m north-west to the entrance porch. The entrance front of the Tudor house probably lay on the north-west side, the alterations to the house in the C18 removing it to the south-east. In the early C19, the formal approach from the gates, marked then by an avenue, was replaced by the extension of the drive from the stables south-westwards past the front of the house and through the southern parkland to emerge on the lane near Vyne Farm (Estate map, 1829) although by the late C19 this had been realigned to emerge at South Lodge (c 450m south-east of the house). This two-storey circular brick lodge with a scalloped-tile domed roof is built in a matching style to North Lodge which stands on the north side of the kitchen garden (c 350m from the house). Both lodges (listed grade II) appear to be of C19 origin as they are first recorded on the OS edition surveyed in 1872&3. The present public entrance to the grounds of The Vyne lies some 180m to the south of the formal entrance gates.

PRINCIPAL BUILDING

The Vyne (listed grade I) stands on level ground on the east side of the registered site. Built of red brick with a pattern of blue diapers, the two-storey building forms a south-east-facing 'U' in plan. Its central portion and the southern wing of the 'U', along with the chapel and three-storey tower at the north-east end of the north front, comprise the surviving portion of the much larger, moated Tudor house constructed by Lord Sandys between 1500 and c 1515. The north wing of the 'U' was probably added in the C17 when the north front also reached its present form with the addition of the range of buildings and matching tower at the south-west corner and of the central portico, the first such on an English country house, by John Webb for Chaloner Chute in c 1654 (guidebook). During the C18, John Chute carried out a considerable redesign of the interior and added a square tower to the centre of the south-east front which, in the mid C19, Wiggett Chute altered to its present gabled form with an added two-storey porch. Immediately north-east of the house is the red-brick Old Stable Block (listed grade I), its two wings dating variously from the C16, C17, and C19 and now in use in part as a tea room. To its north-east stands a further brick-built single-storey stable block with a loft (listed grade II), now in use as garaging and accommodation.

GARDENS AND PLEASURE GROUNDS

The gardens and pleasure grounds extend from the west around to the north and north-east of the house. The north-west front opens onto a grassed terrace with a gravelled walk, created by Wiggett Chute in the mid C19, which runs the length of the house. From the terrace, open lawns slope gently north-westwards down to the shore of the lake which forms a long ribbon bordering the pleasure grounds from a point c 180m south-west of the house to its dam c 220m to the north-east. There are vistas from across the lake to the north-west front. The 'Long Garden Pond' and a 'Great Pond', referred to in the Chute accounts of 1743 (HRO), were probably the forerunners of the lake which was enlarged to its present size and shape by 1776

(Moss survey).

North-east beyond the house, the terraced walk, flanked to the north-west by lawns dotted with clumps and individual trees including cedar and pine, continues for c 50m to the Flower Garden. This rectangular garden, largely enclosed by yew hedges (that to the north-west planted in the late 1990s), was designed and planted in 1997-8 as an Edwardian flower garden with island beds of annuals cut into the lawn in the form of a Greek cross which reflects the floor plan of the Garden Pavilion (listed grade I) which stands in the north-east corner. This circular two-storey building of red brick with a domed roof and four two-storey projections, each with an arched doorway and an arched pedimented window above, dates from the C17 and was possibly built for Chaloner Chute by John Webb. It formed the eastern one of a pair, shown in a painting of 1756 by J H Muntz (guidebook), which were features in a larger, formal garden that was removed, with the western pavilion, in the mid to late C18 by John Chute (ibid). The present open flower garden was formed by Wiggett Chute in the mid C19, on the site of the walled 'little kitchen garden' recorded on the estate map of 1829. From the north-west corner of the Flower Garden, a gravelled path leads 100m due north, along a lime avenue planted in the 1880s by a later Chaloner Chute, to the south wall of the kitchen garden. It then turns north-west to cross the dam and runs south-west to follow the north-west shore of the lake which is planted intermittently with tree clumps. Towards the south-west end (c 150m from the house), brick and stone foundations on the south-east shore survive as remnants of a mid C19 iron bridge (listed, when standing, grade II) which was destroyed in a storm in 1986 (ibid). East of the bridge site and leading back towards the house, the south-east side of the lake is laid out as a Wild Garden, established by Sir Charles Chute c 1910 with semi-natural plantings of trees and shrubs and, since 1995, with added informal drifts of perennials. Grass paths lead from the Wild Garden to the herbaceous borders on the south-west side of the house. These, enclosed within a rectangle of yew hedges, were laid out by the National Trust in the 1960s and replanted in 1996.

PARK

The park lies to the south and north-west of the house and on the east side of the lane to Bramley. It is well furnished with a scatter of mature individual trees and tree clumps with, to the north-west, a few exotics mixed with the otherwise deciduous cover. The present pattern represents, although with some subsequent reduction including that caused by storm damage in 1987 and 1990, that shown established on the OS 1st edition map of 1872-3. An enclosed deer park, centred on an area around the present Vyne Farm (c 180m south-east of the house), existed in the medieval period, into which, in the C16, land to the west of the lane to Bramley, including that around the house itself, was incorporated. During the C17, most of the medieval deer park was turned over to farmland, leaving just the land west of the house as parkland, although later the present area east of the lane to Bramley was re-imparked.

KITCHEN GARDEN

The kitchen garden lies c 220m north-east of the house, close to the site boundary. Its roughly rectangular, c 90m x 45m form is enclosed by high red-brick walls (listed grade II) and is laid out to grass with a central north to south gravelled walk. The garden is shown on William Moss' map of 1776, although it may be of earlier origin (guidebook).

OTHER LAND

West of the house and the western parkland lies Morgaston Wood, an extensive area of woodland planted in various compartments of hardwoods, conifers, and coppice. The Wood is cut by a series of interconnecting walks and rides, these possibly surviving from those said by Chaloner Chute to have been cut in the C18 by John Chute (ibid). The north side of the wood is bounded by Morgaston Road, created in the mid C19 by Wiggett Chute to delineate the boundary of The Vyne estate. Dating from the same period is a pair of lodges (600m north-west of the house) framing an entrance to the estate and comprising Beech Lodge (on the west side) and The Beeches (on the east side), both two-storey brick estate cottages built in the Tudor style (both listed grade II).

Description	Norman, later medieval; restored 1864 by J Colson, but with a retention of many features. Nave with north and south aisles, chancel with north vestry, western tower, and porch. Tile roofing, with almost equal gables to the aisles. Flint walling with stone dressings, windows with plate and bar tracery, buttresses (diagonal at corners), plinth. The porch and vestry are entirely of 1864, but there is a Norman door with chevron and tooth carving, above recessed columns with cushion caps. The west tower has small openings, and a west window above a Perpendicular doorway, also a low pyramid roof. Within, the north arcade is circa 1180, with round arches and cylindrical columns with cushion caps; the south arcade of 1864 has marble piers and foliage caps. There are several floor slab monuments, mainly of the late C17, wall monuments of the C18 (including a Roubiliac effigy of Sir Thomas Hooke of about 1750, but dated 1677), several painted hatchments and a Royal Coat of Arms.

Description	Circa 1150, C13, C14, C16, C19. Norman nave, chancel of 1300 with windows (replacements of lancets) of about 1340, Brocas Chapel on north side of chancel of 1420, north aisle of 1834

(with re-used C15 windows), west tower of about 1250 raised/restored 1834, south porch of 1533. Between the chancel and chapel is an altar tomb with 2 carved figures (of about 1535) beneath a 4-centred panelled archway. The chapel is richly furnished with floor slabs, several C15 brasses, an east window fitted with stained glass of different periods and origin, and a metal helm. There are several wall monuments, hatchments and large Royal Coat of Arms of 1660. The pulpit is dated 1634 and has a tester. The font is original, having a square bowl on a circular shaft and 4 corner shafts, with a C17 cover. King-post roof. Externally, the church has a tile roof, the eaves being raised in the C14. Walling is flint with some plasterwork, and stone dressings, the porch being of red brickwork in English bond with a Tudor doorway. Windows are mostly of 2 lights, cusped or with tracery (one reticulated), the upper parts being original. The tower has fine stone ashlar features of the restoration period, with the upper parts of the diagonal buttresses carried out in red brickwork, the restored spire being topped with a golden ball.

Description	A 'tumulus' is marked on 3rd edition OS mapping. It is possible that this marks the position of a now-destroyed Bronze Age barrow. The barrow may have been known as 'Moth's Grave' locally due to the story of William Moth being buried in the area.

1. A mound covered a grave at this location. The grave is probably that of William Moth of Sherborne St John, a noted philanthropist. After a quarrel with the rector he was buried 'in his close at Park Prewett', in 1737. He was not a Quaker, but local belief held that Quakers were buried in isolated places. The mound is now destroyed.
The grave is exactly in the line of the Winchester -Silchester roman road.

Description	(1) Slightly irregular linear features visible on air photographs of uncertain origin. AP ref: C37.456 Due to proximity to the Roman road to Silchester and the necessity for stone as resource in the town, it has been hypothesised by David Hopkins that these linears represent Roman quarrying activity. This is supported by the notion that they represent quarrying on a greater scale than a small medieval village like Sherbourne would require and evidence sites requiring a similar or greater need for stone such as Hadrian's Wall, where groups of linear evidently supplied Housesteads Fort and attending settlement.

Description	A linear ditch on AP was excavated during an evaluation which also encountered a line of post holes, but no dating evidence. Several ditches orientated SE to NW, possibly sections of a continuous feature. This ditch extended over 90m and was 1.55m deep and 4.3m wide. The fill contained ceramic material and an iron nail. The ditches follow the same alignment as a Roman ditch identified during an earlier excavation, and may be orientated towards a large linear feature visible on aerial photographs.

Description	1) A late Iron Age/Early Romano-British rectilinear enclosure (truncated by the modern road) was discovered during the excavation. 1) A large quantity of iron working slag was found during the excavation. The enclosure ditch on the north-east side of the entrance produced over 70% of the metalworking debris. 150 kg of slag were recovered. 1) The evidence for metalworking at Rooksdown is important as it is dated to c. 400 BC meaning it is one of the earliest smelting sites in the country, and the earliest in Wessex. The apparent scale of the smelting activity found at the site is also important; the amounts of debris are large, particularly considering the relatively small sample of the enclosure excavated, too large to represent production for use by just the inhabitants of the site, rather, suggesting a local or even regional centre of iron production. 1) Various possible ritual deposits were found at Rooksdown, the majority of these are from the Middle Iron Age pits and consist of articulated bone groups, or skulls. 3 horse skulls were found in one deposit. Eight skeletons were present: a horse, four sheep, a pig, a dog and a raven.

Description	Archaeological recording undertaken during re-modelling works. Possible rectangular enclosure formed by two ditches, measuring 39m, orientated ENE for 13.8m before turning NNW. Two curvilinear ditches the opposing termini of which appear to form a NNE-SSW entrance to a penannular enclosure. The full shape of which was hidden by the limit of the excavation. The estimated diameter of the enclosure was approximately 6.3m. The feature was not excavated so remains undated. Ring ditch identified in the southern corner of the site partially revealed by excavations. Ditch was 0.8m deep with convex sides and a rounded base. The ditch varied in width from 2.0m to 2.8m with an internal diameter of 8.5m. Within the centre of the feature were two small pits each containing a cremation burial. The northern pit contained a cremation vessel fully intact. The urn was similar to collared urns of EBA date. The southern cremation was more fragmentary. A pottery sherd associated with this cremation was dated to the LBA. Rectangular pit 2.38m long 1m wide narrowing to 0.5m. Two pits. first 1.2m by 0.75m the other 1.6m by 0.56m. Several undated ditches identified during excavation. Substantial ditch &gt;15m long 4.1m wide by 1.34m deep. Feature truncated. Lower fill contained pottery and animal bones, cattle mandibles. A further ditch to the SW was aligned NNE to SSW, probably interacting with the other ditch. Length of about 6m. Contained fragment of BA pottery in the lower fill. A fragment of Roman pottery was found in the upper fill. Both ditches appear to align with the banjo enclosure nearby. Within the centre of the feature were two small pits each containing a cremation burial. The northern pit contained a cremation vessel fully intact. The urn was similar to collared urns of EBA date. The southern cremation was more fragmentary. A pottery sherd associated with this cremation was dated to the LBA.

Description Responding to the Scoping Report on the 21st of March 2023 the Hampshire County Council County Archaeologist

There are substantial earthworks associated with the 'Stokes Lane' PRoW (which separates the northern and southern areas of the proposal), which has lead the County Archaeologist to speculate that this route is Roman in origin; connecting the 'Manor Farm' Roman Villa to the Winchester to Silchester Roman Road.

Description Adjoining the church is Manor Farm. The farmhouse is a building of notable historic significance with its central core dating from the early 18th century, with perhaps elements of 17th century origins. The gable end to the building punctuates the view up the lane from the village. The buildings, together with the more modern agricultural buildings in the adjoining field, create an important historic setting to the church.
